This exhibition is dedicated to a series of recently built buildings that are quickly changing the architectural image of the city of Rome. Each building is signed by the architectural firm that designed it and by the construction firm that actually realized it, recognizing though that the construction process is a complicate one, and the architect is not the only professional in charge for a successful building. The selection is very open in terms of scale of the buildings - ranging from the urban scale to the scale of interior design - and in terms of architectural languages. But all the works that are part of the exhibition share a common feeling for well fitting into the urban fabric of the historic city or into the luscious landscape of the beautiful regions around Rome, for proposing simple solutions to complex issues, for being more and more sustainable, for the ability of knitting continual cross references between the present and the past in its traditionally difficult and sometimes unresolved relationship with Modernity. The result is that Rome, the great city of history, the beautiful city of the Grand Tour, unexpectedly keeps changing fast in a fast changing world, offering to its italophiles visitors and to its more and more multicultural citizens a very Italian version of an inspiring, possible future.
